

neocon

officeinsight

We've run ads for the Keilhauer Pact Collection as well as its newest lounge chair, Setle, but given COVID travel restrictions we hadn't seen them in person, so we were keen to find them in the Keilhauer showroom. We were not disappointed. Pact is an extensive collection of seating, tables and screens. The elements in the collection are compact, multi-functional "soft-contract" pieces – Keilhauer's term for furniture with the durability required for contract spaces but the soft inviting aspect of more residential pieces. Pact consists of chairs at various heights, tables to be used separately or in conjunction with the seating and privacy screens, sometimes free standing and sometimes embodied in the chair. Setle is available as a handsome new lounge chair or side chair with a very sculpted appearance. We were happy to actually experience the new products but disappointed to miss seeing our old friend Mike Keilhauer.

Keilhauer: Pact stools and Table

Keilhauer: Setle Lounge and Side Chair

At Tuohy we enjoyed reconnecting with our friends Dan and Michael Tuohy and Matt Elder. We ran a story about the design and development of the Pleat Chair (see officeinsight July 20, 2020) and were pleased to find Pleat resplendent in the front window. We find Pleat to be comfortable, handsome and versatile with its various base materials and configurations. We were also delighted with the material choices shown on the Carina Table in the showroom. The new third floor showroom is a great showcase for Tuohy's consistently outstanding designs.

Tuohy: Pleat Chair

Tuohy: Carina Table

The Nienkämper showroom was one of our very favorites in terms of overall design and feel. The Metronome Trestle Table and Vox Outline Credenza looked spectacular together, while the TeePee-like Patkau Cocoon definitely made a