Keilhauer President Meghan Sherwin Recognized with Canada's Clean50 and Clean16 Awards

Sherwin's work to advance Keilhauer's sustainability accomplishments combined with her international influence on the topic of sustainable innovation earned her the top honors.

October 10, 2024, Toronto, ON – Keilhauer President Meghan Sherwin has been honored as a 2025 recipient of both Canada's Clean50 and Clean16 Awards and is recognized as one of 50 Canadian leaders across diverse categories including business, academia, & government. As a Clean16 honoree she is one of only 16 individuals recognized for being the top sustainability leader in their category.

Under Sherwin's leadership, Keilhauer has become a pioneer in sustainable practices, particularly in the areas of circular design and carbon reduction. She spearheaded the launch of the first carbon-neutral task chair and expanded Keilhauer's product offerings to include over 200 carbon-neutral models across 20 families. Additionally, the company now boasts a 100% recyclable collection of tables, seating and storage. Sherwin has also expanded Keilhauer's use of eco-friendly textiles and FSC-certified wood, while launching impactful social initiatives, such as donating remnant leather to the Indigenous Arts Collective.

In addition to her work at Keilhauer, Sherwin represents the company at the United Nations Fashion & Lifestyle Network Roundtable on Circularity and Sustainability in Interiors, further solidifying her leadership in global sustainability efforts.

"Industry plays a critical role in innovating solutions to address climate change," said Sherwin. "At Keilhauer, we're constantly exploring new ways to incorporate circular design principles, reduce our environmental footprint, and inspire the entire industry to continue evolving."

Canada's Clean50 Awards, presented annually by Delta Management Group, celebrate individuals or small teams across 16 categories who have made significant contributions to the clean economy
